

March News—Focus on Vitamin A!

TARGET THE VISIBLE SIGNS OF AGING WITH ULTRACEUTICALS VITAMIN A RANGE

Retinol is one of the most effective ingredients available for the care of skin that is showing visible signs of ageing, especially photoageing or sun damage. With a good course of stabilised and effective retinol, ageing skin can be expected to show significant visible improvements in the appearance of skin texture, tone and fine lines.

Retinol is a fat-soluble form of Vitamin A. All retinoid forms of vitamin A are used in cosmetic and medical applications applied to the skin. The more active forms of Vitamin A include Retinoic Acid or Tretinoin, which can only be sold in Australia by prescription, and Retinol, or all-trans retinol, can be sold up to a level of 1% in unrestricted products. All products containing over 1% may only be sold by prescription. Retinol can induce mild exfoliation which may be accompanied by some redness and mild flaking.

It is always recommended that a first-time user begins with a lighter dosage level such as Ultra A Facial Cream or Ultra A Sheer Facial Cream to condition the skin to tolerate Retinol. At first we recommend usage every second day at the most, but this can increase to once or twice daily once the skin has developed a tolerance to the retinol.
